California public workers are under the greatest attack since the 1930's. The many gains made by public workers from decent wages and working conditions to proper healthcare benefits and pensions are under assault. This is a coordinated effort by big business and their representatives to weaken and destroy both public workers and their unions, which are the largest and most significant part of organized labor in this state and nation.

Public workers must begin the process of educating ourselves first and the public at large why privatization is a threat to our entire society and the future of our state and country.

To carry out this task, on September 25, 2010, a California Public Education and Public Workers Conference will be held to provide an overview of the history of privatization in California and how the economic crisis is now being used as a pretext to step up the outsourcing and destruction of the public sector.

Join with unions from the public education, public transit agencies and public services, and also with students and unorganized workers to discuss the affect of privatization and develop a plan and action program to educate and fight back against these attacks.
