Defend Health & Safety, And Healthcare For Injured Workers And All Working People

Thursday April 28, 2011 7:00 PM
At: ILWU Local 34
801 2nd St./Embarcadero St. SF

April 28, 2011 is an international commemoration day for injured workers and workers killed on the job. Join us in San Francisco, where workers and worker advocates will speak out to remember workers who have died on the job and workers who are fighting for their healthcare. This is also the 100th anniversary of the Triangle Fire in New York city where 146 workers perished.

Today in California, 192 Ca-OSHA inspectors continue to be furloughed, and the medical unit for California's 17 million workers has been eliminated. There is only 1 part time doctor at 50% time. Additionally, the American College for Occupational and Environmental Medicine (ACOEM) and insurance and employer industry medical group supported by the US Chamber of Commerce has illegally inserted their medical guidelines into California workers compensation law.

Workers including TWU 250 A Muni operators, hospital workers and others will speak out on their health and safety conditions, and the fight for justice on the job. Injured workers are being denied treatment as a result of the deregulation of workers comp in SB 899, and the permanent disability was cut by 50% with no vocational training for new jobs. In addition, under insurance/employer/drug industry controlled ACOEM guidelines, workers are being denied treatment for mold in the workplace and other serious workplace injuries.

We need to speak out to protect our health and safety and fight for healthcare for all.
